

Construction Career Websites

Associated General Contractors of America – AGC of America provides resources and information in order to enhance performance and career development opportunities for individuals, member firms and the construction industry.

www.agc.org/Education

Career Voyages – The U.S. Department of Labor has a comprehensive overview of jobs, training and apprenticeship programs, two- and four-year colleges and universities that offer entry into construction industry jobs. The website includes a magazine, “Construction In Demand”, which can be downloaded.

www.careervoyages.gov

Construct My Future – Provides descriptions of the construction industry and careers. There are links for parents, teachers, and students.

www.constructmyfuture.com

Illinois Career Resource Network, Illinois Dept. of Employment – Offers a variety of career exploration products for elementary, middle and high school students and adults.

www.ilworkinfo.com/icrn.htm

National Center for Construction Education and Research – NCCER is a not-for-profit education foundation created to develop industry-driven standardized craft training programs.

www.careers.nccer.org

Rockford Area Career Clearinghouse – RACC is an organization which helps to attract and retain young talent to the Rockford Region. RACC works to link recent graduates to area companies for their first professional employment position. The RACC also helps to fill internship openings and create or re-establish internship programs.

www.rockfordareacareers.com

U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics – Provides an online “Career Guide to Industries” which gives information on: occupations in the industry, training and advancement, earnings, expected job prospects and working conditions.

<http://stats.bls.gov/oco/cg>